A definitive volume of works by the preeminent American poet includes Some Trees, as well as the complete texts of such collections as Rivers and Mountains, Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror, and Houseboat Days. 15,000 first printing.

An anthology of poetry, drawn from all periods of the author's work.

Dating from one of the most studied creative periods of John Ashbery's career, a groundbreaking collection showcasing his signature polyphonic poem "Litany" First published in 1979, four years after Ashbery's masterpiece Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror, the poems in As We Know represent the great American poet writing at the peak of his experimental powers. The book 's flagship poem, the seventy-page " Litany, " remains one of the most exciting and challenging of Ashbery ' s career. Presented in two facing columns, the poem asks to be read as independent but countervailing monologues, creating a dialogue of the private and the public, the human and the divine, the real and the unreal—a wild and beautiful conversation that contains multitudes. As We Know also collects some of Ashbery ' s most witty, self-reflexive interrogations of poetry itself, including " Late Echo " and " Five Pedantic Pieces " ( " An idea I had and talked about / Became the things I do " ), as well as a wry, laugh-out-loud call-and-response sequence of one-line poems on Ashbery ' s defining subject: the writing of poetry ( " I Had Thought Things Were Going Along Well / But I was mistaken " ). Perhaps the most admired poem in this much-discussed volume is “ Tapestry, ” a measured exploration of the inevitable distance that arises between art, audience, and artist, which the critic Harold Bloom called “ an ‘ Ode on a Grecian Urn ’ for our time. ” Built of doubles, of echoes, of dualities and combinations, As We Know is the breathtaking expression of a singular American voice.

The acclaimed American poet's seventh collection, portraying the new stirrings, the final whispers, the unvisited places, and the disguises of reality that identify an intensely individual vision

John Ashbery ' s first published book of poems, handpicked from the slush pile by none other than W. H. Auden Ashbery ' s Some Trees narrowly beat out a manuscript by fellow New York poet Frank O ' Hara to win the renowned Yale Series of Younger Poets prize in 1955—after the book had been rejected in an early screening round. Competition judge W. H. Auden was perhaps the first to note, in his original preface to Some Trees, the meditative polyphony that decades of readers have come to identify as Ashbery ' s unique style: “ If he is to be true to nature in this world, he must accept strange juxtapositions of imagery, singular associations of ideas. ” But not all is strange and associative here: Some Trees includes “ The Instruction Manual, ” one of Ashbery ' s most conversational and perhaps most quoted poems, as well as a number of poems that display his casually masterful handling of such traditional forms as the sonnet, the pantoum, the Italian canzone, and even, with “ The Painter, ” the odd tricky sestina. Some Trees, an essential collection for Ashbery scholars and newbies alike, introduced one of postwar America ’ s most enduring and provocative poetic voices, by turns conversational, discordant, haunting, and wise.

From one of our most important modern poets comes an essential early collection, including the famous long poems “ The Skaters ” and “ Clepsydra ” When Rivers and Mountains was published in 1966, American poetry was in a state of radical redefinition, with John Ashbery recognized as one of the leading voices in the New York School of poets. Ashbery himself had just returned to America from ten years abroad working as an art critic in France, and Rivers and Mountains, his third published collection of poems, is now considered by many critics to represent a pivotal transition point in his artistic career. The poet who would gain widespread acclaim with his multiple-award-winning Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror (1975) is, in this collection, still very much engaged in the intimate, personal project of taking his poetry apart and putting it back together again, interrogating not just the act of writing but poetry itself—its purpose, its composition, its fundamental parts.

Nominated for a National Book Award by a panel of judges that included W. H. Auden and James Dickey, Rivers and Mountains includes two of Ashbery's most studied and admired works.

“Clepsydra,” which takes its name from an ancient device for measuring the passage of time, echoes both the physical form and the philosophical weight of a water clock in its contemplation of the experience of time as it passes. “ The Skaters, ” the long poem that closes the collection, was immediately praised as a masterpiece of modern American poetry, and is the work that perhaps most clearly introduces the voice for which Ashbery is now well known and loved: generous, restless, wide-ranging, and human.

A compendium of selected works by the influential New York poet features poetry from "A City in Winter" and his six other collections of poems, accompanied by an overview of his work and influence on modern American literature.

A selection of key works from ten major collections by the influential American poet as written throughout the past two decades includes pieces from the critically acclaimed April Galleons and Flow Chart,
