Brian Lavery looks at the style and competence of politicians and military commanders, the leadership and example of great men such as Nelson and Churchill, examines unexplored official papers and looks at the war situation as seen by great literary figures such as Jane Austen and Evelyn Waugh.

Prefaced by brief historical and biographical introductions, the examples in this book show how words can be used to inspire, to comfort, to move, or to enthuse even the most seemingly hard-bitten of listeners. From rallying cries such as Garibaldi's 'To arms, then, all of you!' and Chou En-lai's 'We must hold aloft the great red banner' to sombre statements such as Sheikh Mujibur Rahman's 'This time the struggle is for our freedom', each extract gives us an insight into the hardships of war and the fight for courage. Spanning over two millennia and with speeches from across the globe, We Shall Fight on the Beaches is a book to inspire and inflame the reader

This book is an attempt to put into cold reality Churchill's famous rhetoric about 'fighting in the streets, beaches and landing grounds' to resist a German invasion early in the Second World War. The book, written by a Scots Guards officer, explores terrain, methods of attack and defence; the use of explosives; arms and equipment; training and exercises and is aimed at the Home Guard.

A factual work of military history based on years of research by the author. Operation Sea Lion was the German code name for the invasion of Great Britain in the autumn of 1940. This work focuses on the actual ability of the British armed forces to repel such an invasion. It shows the naval, army and air forces locations, equipment states, organisation, numbers and movements at that time. It shows how the political and military leadership prepared for the vital task of defending this nation and, whilst it does not prophesise as to the outcome, it looks at how each of the potential stages of invasion could have developed with the information available from all sources.
